Each period's net pay equals the corresponding payroll deposit on your bank statement. Social security tax is a constant 6.2% of period wages (the wage-base cap is not reached on regular monthly pay).

Reading your statement

- Pre-tax 401(k) reduces federal taxable wages but not social security or Medicare wages.
- Pre-tax medical and HSA (Code W) reduce social security, Medicare, and federal taxable wages.
- Restricted stock unit (RSU) vesting events are processed off-cycle and appear on separate supplemental statements; they are not reflected in these regular monthly stubs.
- Year-to-date social security tax will stop accruing once year-to-date social security wages reach $176,100 for 2026.

Tax Withholding Elections on File

Election	On file
Federal filing status (Form W-4)	Single / no dependents
Federal extra withholding per period	$0.00
State income tax	N/A — Washington
401(k) deferral rate	15% of eligible pay
HSA payroll election (annual)	$3,000.00
Medical plan	HDHP — self only

Equity compensation is withheld for federal income tax at the 22% statutory supplemental rate. If your marginal rate exceeds 22%, consider increasing per-period federal withholding or making estimated payments to avoid a balance due.

Paid Time Off and Benefits Summary

This summary is informational and does not affect taxable wages. Accrued paid time off: 96.0 hours. Sick leave balance: 40.0 hours (Seattle Paid Sick and Safe Time).

Employer benefits in effect: high-deductible health plan with HSA, group term life insurance (employer-paid, coverage at or below $50,000, not taxable), short- and long-term disability, and a 401(k) plan with employer match.

Employer 401(k) match is contributed to your retirement account and is not included in your taxable wages. Roth 401(k) contributions, if elected, would be after-tax; you have elected traditional pre-tax deferrals.

Commuter benefits and other voluntary deductions: none currently elected.

How Your Net Pay Is Calculated

Gross pay is your monthly salary. From gross pay we subtract pre-tax deductions (401(k), medical premiums, and HSA), which reduce the wages subject to federal income tax.

Social Security tax (6.2%) and Medicare tax (1.45%) are calculated on Social Security/Medicare wages, which exclude medical and HSA but not the 401(k) deferral.

Federal income tax is withheld based on your Form W-4 elections and the taxable wages for the period. Washington has no state income tax to withhold.

Net pay is gross pay minus all pre-tax deductions and all taxes withheld, and is deposited to your account on file.
