Instructions for Recipient (1099-INT)

Box 1. Shows taxable interest paid to you during the calendar year by the payer. Report on Schedule B (Form 1040) if your total taxable interest is more than $1,500; otherwise report directly on Form 1040.

Box 8. Shows tax-exempt interest paid to you during the calendar year. Report this on the tax-exempt interest line of Form 1040. This amount may be subject to backup withholding.

Instructions for Recipient (1099-DIV)

Box 1a. Shows total ordinary dividends that are taxable. Box 1b. Shows the portion of box 1a that may be eligible for reduced (qualified dividend) tax rates.

Box 2a. Shows total capital gain distributions from a regulated investment company or real estate investment trust. Report on Schedule D, line 13.

Box 12. Shows exempt-interest dividends from a mutual fund or other regulated investment company paid to you during the calendar year. Report on the tax-exempt interest line of Form 1040. This amount is generally not subject to federal income tax but may affect the taxable portion of social security benefits and certain other items.

Instructions for Recipient (1099-B)

Box 1a–1e. Identify the property sold, the dates acquired and sold, the gross proceeds, and the cost or other basis. For covered securities, the basis shown was reported to the IRS.

Box 1f and 1g show the amount of any accrued market discount and any wash-sale loss disallowed. Use Form 8949 and Schedule D to report the transaction and compute your gain or loss.

Cost Basis Reporting Methods

Unless you elected a specific identification method at the time of sale, the firm reports cost basis using its default method for the security type. For mutual funds, the default may be average cost; for equities, first-in, first-out (FIFO). The method used can affect the amount of gain or loss reported.

Covered securities are those acquired on or after the applicable effective date for the security type; their adjusted basis is reported to the IRS. Noncovered securities have basis reported to you only. Review your records to confirm the basis used is accurate before filing.

State Tax Information for Exempt-Interest Dividends

Exempt-interest dividends are generally exempt from federal income tax. The portion attributable to your home state's obligations may also be exempt from your state income tax; the remainder is typically taxable by your state. A breakdown by state is available in the fund's annual tax information letter.

A portion of exempt-interest dividends may be a tax preference item for the federal alternative minimum tax if attributable to specified private activity bonds; that amount, if any, is shown in box 13 of Form 1099-DIV.

Backup Withholding and Tax Reporting Calendar

If you did not furnish a correct taxpayer identification number or are otherwise subject to backup withholding, the firm is required to withhold a percentage of certain payments and remit it to the IRS. No backup withholding was applied to this account for the year shown unless reflected in the federal income tax withheld boxes above.

Consolidated 1099 forms are generally furnished by mid-February. Corrected forms may be issued if issuers reclassify distributions after the original mailing; if you receive a corrected form after filing, you may need to amend your return.
