Instructions for Recipient

Form 1099-INT — Box 1.

Shows taxable interest paid to you during the calendar year. This amount generally is reported on Schedule B (Form 1040) if the total exceeds $1,500. Box 8 shows tax-exempt interest, which is not subject to federal income tax but must be reported on Form 1040, line 2a, and may be subject to the net investment income tax rules only if it is not in fact exempt.

Form 1099-INT — Box 8 and Box 9.

Box 8 shows tax-exempt interest, including exempt-interest dividends from a mutual fund or other regulated investment company, paid to you during the calendar year. Box 9 shows the portion of box 8 that is specified private activity bond interest, which may be a preference item for the alternative minimum tax.

Form 1099-DIV — Box 1a and Box 1b.

Box 1a shows total ordinary dividends that are taxable. Include this on Form 1040. Box 1b shows the portion of box 1a that is qualified dividends, generally taxed at the lower long-term capital gain rates if holding-period requirements are met.

Form 1099-DIV — Box 2a.

Shows total capital gain distributions from a regulated investment company or real estate investment trust. Report on Schedule D, or directly on Form 1040 if no other capital gains or losses are reported and you are not required to file Schedule D.

Form 1099-B — Boxes 1a–1h.

For each transaction, the form shows the description, date acquired, date sold, proceeds, and (for covered securities) the cost or other basis. Use Form 8949 and Schedule D to report your gains and losses. Check the appropriate box on Form 8949 to indicate whether basis was reported to the IRS.

Cost basis and covered securities.

For covered securities, the payer reports adjusted basis to the IRS. For noncovered securities, basis is not reported; you must determine and report it. Wash-sale loss disallowed, if any, is shown and already reflected in the reported gain or loss for covered lots.

Backup withholding.

If federal income tax was withheld under the backup withholding rules, it is shown in the applicable box and should be claimed as tax withheld on your return.

Definitions and Frequently Asked Questions

Definitions

Ordinary dividends	Distributions of money, stock, or other property paid by a corporation or fund out of earnings and profits.
Qualified dividends	Ordinary dividends that meet holding-period and other requirements and are taxed at long-term capital gain rates.
Tax-exempt interest	Interest, including exempt-interest dividends, that is exempt from federal income tax; still reported on your return.
Proceeds	The gross or net amount received from a sale, exchange, or redemption, before or after commissions as indicated.
Covered vs. noncovered	Whether the payer is required to report cost basis to the IRS for the security.

Frequently asked questions

Q. Why does box 1b not equal box 1a?

A. Box 1b (qualified dividends) is a subset of box 1a (total ordinary dividends). Only the portion meeting holding-period requirements is qualified; the remainder is taxed at ordinary rates.

Q. Do I report tax-exempt interest?

A. Yes. Although it is not taxed federally, tax-exempt interest is reported on Form 1040, line 2a, and may affect other calculations such as the taxable portion of Social Security benefits.

Q. What if my records differ from the 1099-B basis for a noncovered lot?

A. You may report the correct basis from your own records. Basis for noncovered securities is not reported to the IRS by the payer.

Q. Will I receive a corrected statement?

A. If an issuer reclassifies a distribution after this statement is issued, a corrected consolidated 1099 may be furnished. File your return using the most recent statement.

Cost Basis Reporting Regulations

Background

Federal law requires brokers to report adjusted cost basis for 'covered' securities to the IRS on Form 1099-B, in addition to gross proceeds. The rules phased in by security type: equities acquired on or after January 1, 2011; mutual funds and dividend reinvestment plan shares acquired on or after January 1, 2012; and certain debt instruments and options acquired on or after January 1, 2014.

Covered securities

For covered securities, the cost basis shown reflects adjustments required by the regulations, including wash-sale loss disallowance and certain corporate-action adjustments. The gain or loss shown should generally be carried to Form 8949 with the box indicating that basis was reported to the IRS.

Noncovered securities

For noncovered securities (generally those acquired before the applicable phase-in date, or transferred in without basis), the broker reports gross proceeds but not basis. Any basis shown is provided as a courtesy from available records. You are responsible for determining and reporting the correct basis.

Default accounting method

Unless you elected otherwise before settlement, sales are reported using the first-in, first-out (FIFO) method for determining which lots were sold. Average cost is the default for mutual fund shares unless another method was elected.

Recipient Instructions (continued) — Reporting Capital Gains and Losses

Using Form 8949 and Schedule D

Report each sale shown on Form 1099-B on Form 8949, then carry the totals to Schedule D. Transactions are grouped by holding period (short-term vs. long-term) and by whether basis was reported to the IRS. Use a separate Form 8949, Part I or Part II, for each grouping, checking box A, B, or C (short-term) or box D, E, or F (long-term) as applicable.

Adjustments

If an adjustment to gain or loss is required (for example, for a wash sale, a nondeductible loss, or an incorrect basis), enter the adjustment code and amount in the adjustment columns of Form 8949. Common codes include 'W' for a wash sale and 'B' for a basis correction.

Holding period

A security held more than one year before sale produces a long-term gain or loss, generally taxed at preferential rates. A security held one year or less produces a short-term gain or loss, taxed at ordinary rates.

Netting gains and losses

On Schedule D, short-term gains and losses are netted separately from long-term gains and losses. A net loss may offset other income up to the annual limit, with any excess carried forward to future years.

Qualified dividends and the tax worksheet

If you have qualified dividends or a net capital gain, your tax is generally figured using the Qualified Dividends and Capital Gain Tax Worksheet or the Schedule D Tax Worksheet, which apply the preferential long-term capital gain rates.

Important Tax Information and Reclassification Notice

Possible reclassification of distributions

Distributions paid by mutual funds and other regulated investment companies are sometimes reclassified after year-end (for example, between ordinary dividends, qualified dividends, capital gain distributions, return of capital, and exempt-interest dividends). If a reclassification affects your account after this statement is issued, a corrected consolidated Form 1099 will be furnished.

State and local taxes

A portion of exempt-interest dividends may be taxable in your state of residence. The 'Tax-exempt interest by state' schedule in this statement provides the information typically needed for state reporting. Consult your state's instructions and your tax advisor.

Net investment income

Interest, dividends, and net capital gains are generally items of investment income. Certain taxpayers may be subject to an additional tax on net investment income. Consult your tax advisor to determine how the rules apply to your situation.

Foreign accounts and assets

U.S. taxpayers with interests in foreign financial accounts or assets may have separate reporting obligations. This account is a domestic account and is not a foreign financial account.

Wash-Sale and Holding-Period Rules

Wash-sale rule

A wash sale occurs when you sell a security at a loss and buy the same or a substantially identical security within 30 days before or after the sale. The loss is disallowed and added to the basis of the replacement shares. For covered securities, any wash-sale loss disallowed during the year is shown on Form 1099-B and is already reflected in the reported gain or loss. No wash-sale adjustments were required for the transactions in this account.

Holding-period summary for this account

Holding period	Number of lots	Proceeds	Gain/(loss)
Long-term (held > 1 year)	6	$48,500.00	$14,500.00
Short-term (held ≤ 1 year)	0	$0.00	$0.00

Record retention and corrected forms

Retain this statement with your tax records for at least three years after you file your return. If you receive a corrected Form 1099 after filing, you may need to file an amended return. Corrected statements are clearly marked 'CORRECTED' at the top.

Reinvested distributions and basis additions

Reinvested dividends increase your cost basis in the reinvesting positions. The reinvested amounts shown on your account statement are added to basis and will reduce taxable gain when those shares are eventually sold. Reinvested dividends remain taxable in the year received even though no cash was distributed to you.

Additional frequently asked questions

Q. Why is my dividend taxable if it was reinvested?

A. Dividends are taxable in the year credited to your account, whether paid in cash or reinvested in additional shares. The reinvested amount is added to your cost basis.

Q. How do exempt-interest dividends affect my return?

A. They are reported as tax-exempt interest and are not subject to federal income tax, but may be subject to state tax depending on the source, and are taken into account in certain other calculations.

Q. What should I do if I sold shares not shown here?

A. All reportable sales from this account for the year are included. If you transferred or sold shares held elsewhere, those will be reported by the respective custodian.

Filing Reminders and Form Availability

When your forms are available

This consolidated Form 1099 was prepared based on information available as of the statement date. In limited cases, an issuer may provide revised tax information after the original mailing, which can result in a corrected statement. Before filing, confirm you are using the most recent version of this statement.

Forms furnished for this account

Form	Furnished to you	Furnished to the IRS
1099-INT	Yes	Yes
1099-DIV	Yes	Yes
1099-B	Yes	Yes (covered basis; proceeds for all)
1099-MISC	Not applicable	No
1099-OID	Not applicable	No

General filing reminders

- Report taxable interest and ordinary dividends; if either exceeds $1,500, complete Schedule B.
- Report tax-exempt interest on Form 1040, line 2a, even though it is not taxed federally.
- Report sales of securities on Form 8949 and Schedule D, using the holding-period and covered/noncovered groupings shown.
- Keep this statement and your trade confirmations with your tax records.
- Consult your tax advisor about how these items interact with your overall tax situation.

Taxpayer identification

The recipient taxpayer identification number shown on this statement is truncated for your protection. The complete number is on file and was used for IRS reporting. If your name or taxpayer identification number is incorrect, contact us promptly so we can issue a corrected statement.

Instructions for Recipient — Form 1099-INT

General. Box 1 shows taxable interest paid to you during the year. It does not include interest shown in box 3. Report this amount on your income tax return; if the total taxable interest from all sources is more than $1,500, complete Schedule B.

Box 2. Shows interest or principal forfeited because of an early withdrawal of time savings, which you may be able to deduct as an adjustment to income.

Box 3. Shows interest on U.S. Savings Bonds, Treasury bills, Treasury bonds, and Treasury notes. This may be taxable for federal purposes but is generally exempt from state and local income taxes.

Box 4. Shows backup withholding. A payer must backup withhold on certain payments if you did not give your taxpayer identification number. Include this amount on your return as tax withheld.

Box 8. Shows tax-exempt interest, including tax-exempt interest dividends from a mutual fund, paid to you during the year. Report this amount on your return as tax-exempt interest. This amount may be subject to backup withholding.

Box 9. Shows tax-exempt interest that is a specified private activity bond interest. This amount is generally a tax preference item for the alternative minimum tax.

Boxes 11 through 13. Show bond premium amounts that, depending on your elections, reduce the amount of interest income you report.

Instructions for Recipient — Form 1099-DIV

Box 1a. Shows total ordinary dividends that are taxable. Include this on your return. If your total ordinary dividends from all sources are more than $1,500, complete Schedule B.

Box 1b. Shows the portion of box 1a that may qualify for reduced capital gain rates. See the instructions for Form 1040 for how to determine your qualified dividends.

Box 2a. Shows total capital gain distributions from a regulated investment company or real estate investment trust. Report on Schedule D. If no amount is shown in boxes 2b through 2f and your only capital gains and losses are these distributions, you may not need to file Schedule D.

Boxes 2b through 2f. Show portions of box 2a that are unrecaptured section 1250 gain, section 1202 gain, collectibles gain, and section 897 amounts, which are taxed under special rules.

Box 3. Shows a nondividend distribution, a return of your cost or other basis. It is not taxed until your basis is recovered, after which it is taxed as capital gain.

Box 5. Shows the portion of box 1a that may be eligible for the qualified business income deduction as a section 199A dividend, generally from a real estate investment trust.

Box 7. Shows foreign tax paid, which you may be able to claim as a deduction or a credit on your return.

Instructions for Recipient — Form 1099-B

General. Each transaction shows the proceeds from the sale, redemption, or exchange of a security. Report these transactions on Form 8949 and Schedule D. The form indicates whether each transaction is short-term or long-term and whether basis was reported to the IRS.

Box 1a through 1e. Show the description, dates acquired and sold, proceeds, and cost or other basis for the security. For covered securities the basis is reported to the IRS; for noncovered securities the basis is not reported and you must supply it.

Box 1f and 1g. Show the amount of accrued market discount and the amount of any wash-sale loss disallowed. A disallowed wash-sale loss is added to the basis of the replacement security.

Box 2. Indicates whether the gain or loss is short-term or long-term and whether it is ordinary. Use this to determine which part of Form 8949 to use.

Box 4. Shows backup withholding, which you include on your return as tax withheld.

Boxes 5 and 6. Indicate whether the security is noncovered and whether the proceeds reported are gross or net of commissions and option premiums.

Instructions for Recipient — Forms 1099-OID, 1099-MISC, and 1099-NEC

Form 1099-OID. Reports original issue discount, which is a form of interest that accrues over the life of certain debt instruments and is generally taxable each year even though you may not receive a cash payment. No original issue discount was reported for this account.

Form 1099-MISC. Reports miscellaneous income such as royalties, substitute payments in lieu of dividends or interest, and other income. Substitute payments may arise when securities are loaned. No reportable miscellaneous income applies to this account.

Form 1099-NEC. Reports nonemployee compensation of $600 or more. This generally does not arise in a brokerage account and none is reported here.

Backup withholding. If you did not provide a correct taxpayer identification number or were notified of underreporting, the payer may be required to backup withhold on reportable payments. No backup withholding was applied to this account.

Supplemental Information and FATCA

Information not reported to the IRS. Certain amounts are provided to you for your records but are not reported to the IRS, such as accrued interest paid on purchases, margin interest expense, and certain fees. These amounts are listed in the supplemental detail section.

Accrued interest paid. When you buy a bond between interest payment dates, you may pay the seller accrued interest. You can reduce your interest income by the accrued interest you paid. No accrued interest applies to this account.

Foreign Account Tax Compliance Act (FATCA). If the FATCA filing requirement box is checked on a form, the payer is reporting to satisfy its FATCA reporting requirement. This account is a domestic account and the box is not checked.

State tax withholding. If state income tax was withheld from any payment, it is shown in the applicable boxes. No state income tax was withheld from payments to this account.

Tax Law Summary and Frequently Asked Questions

Preferential rates. Qualified dividends and net long-term capital gains are taxed at 0%, 15%, or 20% depending on your taxable income, generally lower than the rates on ordinary income.

Net investment income. Higher-income taxpayers may owe an additional tax on net investment income, which includes taxable interest, dividends, and net capital gains. Tax-exempt interest is not net investment income.

Holding period. Whether a gain is short-term or long-term depends on how long you held the security. Long-term treatment requires holding the security more than one year.

Cost basis methods. The method used to determine which shares are sold (such as first-in, first-out or specific identification) affects your gain or loss. The default method for this account is first-in, first-out unless you elected otherwise before settlement.

Additional questions and answers

Q. Do I need to report a sale if I had a loss?

A. Yes. Report all sales shown on Form 1099-B, whether they resulted in a gain or a loss. Losses may offset gains and, within limits, other income.

Q. What if a distribution is reclassified after I file?

A. If a corrected Form 1099 changes your income after you file, you may need to file an amended return. Corrected statements are marked 'CORRECTED.'

Q. Are reinvested dividends taxable?

A. Yes. Dividends reinvested in additional shares are taxable in the year credited and are added to the cost basis of the new shares.

Q. How do I report tax-exempt interest from more than one state?

A. Use the state allocation schedule to determine the portion attributable to your state of residence, which may be excluded from state tax depending on your state's rules.

Mutual Fund and REIT Distributions

Capital gain distributions. Regulated investment companies, including mutual funds and exchange-traded funds, distribute net realized long-term capital gains to shareholders. These are reported in box 2a of Form 1099-DIV and are taxed as long-term capital gain regardless of how long you held the fund.

Return of capital. A distribution that exceeds a fund's earnings and profits is a nondividend distribution, reported in box 3. It is not taxed when received; instead, it reduces your cost basis. Once your basis reaches zero, additional nondividend distributions are taxed as capital gain.

Section 199A REIT dividends. Certain dividends from real estate investment trusts may qualify for the qualified business income deduction and are reported in box 5. No section 199A dividends were paid to this account.

Exempt-interest dividends. Distributions from municipal bond funds that represent interest on tax-exempt obligations are reported as tax-exempt interest. A portion may be subject to the alternative minimum tax if attributable to specified private activity bonds.

Original Issue Discount and Bond Premium

Original issue discount (OID). OID is the excess of a debt instrument's stated redemption price at maturity over its issue price. It accrues as interest income over the life of the instrument and is generally taxable each year even though no cash is paid until maturity. No OID was reported for this account.

Accrued market discount. If you buy a bond in the secondary market for less than its adjusted issue price, the discount generally accrues and is treated as ordinary interest income when the bond is sold or matures.

Bond premium. If you pay more than face value for a taxable bond, you may elect to amortize the premium, which reduces the interest income you report. For tax-exempt bonds, amortization of premium is required and reduces your basis. No bond premium amounts apply to this account.

Wash Sales, Short Sales, and Straddles

Wash sale rule. If you sell a security at a loss and buy the same or a substantially identical security within 30 days before or after the sale, the loss is disallowed and added to the basis of the replacement shares, deferring the loss until the replacement is sold.

Worked example. Suppose you sell 100 shares at a $1,000 loss on December 1 and repurchase 100 shares of the same security on December 20. The $1,000 loss is disallowed; it is added to the basis of the new shares, so you recover the benefit when you later sell those shares in a non-wash transaction.

Short sales. In a short sale, you sell borrowed securities and later buy securities to close the position. Gain or loss is generally recognized when the short sale is closed, and special holding-period rules apply.

Section 1256 contracts. Certain regulated futures and options contracts are marked to market at year end and taxed as 60% long-term and 40% short-term, regardless of holding period. No section 1256 contracts apply to this account.

Corporate Actions and Basis Adjustments

Stock splits. A stock split increases the number of shares you hold and reduces the per-share basis proportionally; your total basis is unchanged. Your records and the reported basis reflect any splits during the holding period.

Mergers and exchanges. When a company you hold is acquired, you may receive cash, stock, or a combination. The tax treatment depends on the structure of the transaction and may result in recognized gain. Basis is adjusted accordingly.

Spin-offs. In a tax-free spin-off, you receive shares of a new company and allocate a portion of your original basis to the new shares based on relative fair market values.

Return of capital and basis tracking. Nondividend distributions and certain corporate actions reduce your basis. Accurate basis tracking is essential to compute the correct gain or loss when you sell.

Foreign Tax, State Considerations, and Gifted or Inherited Securities

Foreign tax credit or deduction. Foreign taxes paid on dividends, reported in box 7 of Form 1099-DIV, may be claimed as a credit (often without Form 1116 if below the threshold) or as an itemized deduction. No foreign tax was reported for this account.

State taxation of municipal interest. Exempt-interest dividends are generally exempt from federal tax, but the portion attributable to obligations of states other than your state of residence may be taxable by your state. Use the state allocation schedule provided.

Gifted securities. If you received securities as a gift, your basis is generally the donor's basis (for gain) or the lower of the donor's basis or fair market value at the gift date (for loss). The holding period generally carries over from the donor.

Inherited securities. Securities you inherit generally receive a basis equal to their fair market value on the date of the decedent's death (or an alternate valuation date), and are treated as held long-term regardless of the actual holding period.

Year-End Planning and Form Mailing Schedule

Tax-loss harvesting. Realizing losses before year end can offset realized gains and, within limits, ordinary income. Be mindful of the wash sale rule when repurchasing similar securities.

Holding for long-term treatment. Holding a security more than one year before selling qualifies the gain for preferential long-term rates. Consider the holding period when planning sales near the one-year mark.

Form mailing schedule. The consolidated Form 1099 is generally mailed by mid-February. Because some issuers finalize tax information late, a corrected statement may be issued later; consider this before filing early.

Cost basis elections. You may change your default cost basis method for future sales by notifying us before the settlement date of a sale. The method affects which lots are sold and the resulting gain or loss.

Worked Examples

Example 1 — Long-term gain on a covered lot. You bought 40 shares for $7,980 and sold them for $11,860 after holding more than one year.

Item	Amount
Proceeds	$11,860.00
Cost basis	$7,980.00
Long-term gain	$3,880.00

Report on Form 8949 (Box D), then Schedule D. The gain is taxed at the long-term capital gain rate.

Example 2 — Qualified vs. ordinary dividends. A fund pays $2,460 in ordinary dividends, of which $2,110 are qualified.

Item	Amount
Ordinary dividends (box 1a)	$2,460.00
Qualified portion (box 1b)	$2,110.00

Item	Amount
Non-qualified portion	$350.00

The $2,110 qualified portion is taxed at capital gain rates; the $350 balance is taxed at ordinary rates.

Example 3 — Tax-exempt interest with AMT. A municipal bond fund pays $1,840 of exempt-interest dividends, none from private activity bonds.

Item	Amount
Exempt-interest dividends (box 8)	$1,840.00
Specified private activity bond interest (box 9)	$0.00

The $1,840 is reported as tax-exempt interest and is not subject to regular tax or, here, to the alternative minimum tax.

Example 4 — Noncovered lot basis. You sold a noncovered position for $4,180; the broker did not report basis, but your records show $2,790.

Item	Amount
Proceeds (reported to IRS)	$4,180.00
Cost basis (from your records)	$2,790.00
Long-term gain	$1,390.00

Report on Form 8949 (Box E) and supply the basis from your records; only the proceeds were reported to the IRS.

Comprehensive Glossary

Adjusted basis	Your cost basis increased by reinvested distributions and certain adjustments, and decreased by returns of capital.
Backup withholding	Tax withheld from certain payments when a correct taxpayer identification number is not on file.
Capital gain distribution	A fund's distribution of its net realized long-term capital gains, taxed as long-term gain.
Constructive receipt	Income is taxable when it is credited to your account or made available to you, even if not withdrawn.
Covered security	A security for which the broker must report cost basis to the IRS.
Ex-dividend date	The date on or after which a buyer is not entitled to the next declared dividend.
Holding period	The length of time you owned a security, which determines short- versus long-term treatment.
Net capital gain	The excess of net long-term capital gain over net short-term capital loss.
Noncovered security	A security for which the broker is not required to report cost basis to the IRS.
Qualified dividend	A dividend taxed at long-term capital gain rates because holding-period and other requirements are met.
Reinvestment	Using a distribution to purchase additional shares, which increases share count and basis.
Tax lot	A group of shares acquired in a single transaction, tracked separately for basis purposes.
Wash sale	A loss sale paired with a purchase of substantially identical securities within 30 days, causing the loss to be disallowed.
Yield	Income from an investment expressed as a percentage of its price.

Q. Why did I receive a corrected 1099 last year?

A. Issuers sometimes finalize the character of distributions after the original statement is mailed; a corrected statement reflects the updated information.

Q. How are reinvested capital gain distributions taxed?

A. They are taxed as long-term capital gain in the year distributed, even though reinvested, and they increase your cost basis.

Q. Do I owe tax on a stock that went up but that I did not sell?

A. No. Unrealized appreciation is not taxed until you sell. Only realized gains and distributions are taxable.

Q. What is the difference between box 1a and box 2a on Form 1099-DIV?

A. Box 1a is ordinary dividends; box 2a is capital gain distributions. They are taxed differently and reported on different parts of your return.

Q. How do I treat foreign taxes shown on my 1099-DIV?

A. You may claim them as a credit or a deduction. A credit is usually more valuable; small amounts may be claimed without filing Form 1116.

Q. Why is my tax-exempt interest on my return if it is not taxed?

A. Tax-exempt interest is reported for informational purposes and can affect other items, such as the taxable portion of Social Security benefits and certain phaseouts.

Tax Form Descriptions and Mailing Schedule

Form	What it reports	Typical availability
1099-INT	Interest income and tax-exempt interest	Mid-February
1099-DIV	Dividends and distributions	Mid-February
1099-B	Proceeds from sales and redemptions	Mid-February
1099-OID	Original issue discount	Mid-February
1099-MISC	Royalties and substitute payments	Mid-February
Consolidated 1099	Combines the above for one account	Mid-February; corrections later if needed

Important reminders

- Use the most recent version of this statement; a corrected statement supersedes earlier versions.
- Report all income shown, including tax-exempt interest, on the appropriate lines of your return.
- Keep this statement with your tax records for at least three years after you file.
- Consult your tax advisor about how these items interact with your overall tax situation, including any additional taxes that may apply.

Additional worked examples

Example 5 — Reinvested dividend and basis. You received a $615 dividend on a fund and reinvested it in additional shares.

Item	Amount
Dividend received (taxable)	$615.00
Shares purchased with dividend	added to position
Basis increase	$615.00

The $615 is taxable this year and increases your cost basis, reducing taxable gain when you eventually sell.

Example 6 — Netting gains and losses. During the year you realized a $1,390 long-term gain and a $1,995 long-term loss on different positions.

Item	Amount
Long-term gain	$1,390.00
Long-term loss	($1,995.00)
Net long-term result	($605.00)

Net the long-term transactions together on Schedule D; a net loss may offset other income within annual limits, with any excess carried forward.

Retirement Accounts, Trusts, and Special Situations

Retirement account distributions. Distributions from individual retirement accounts and employer plans are reported on Form 1099-R, not on this consolidated statement. This statement covers only the taxable brokerage account.

Required minimum distributions. If you have a traditional IRA or certain employer plans, you may be required to take minimum distributions after reaching the applicable age. These do not apply to a taxable brokerage account.

Custodial and trust accounts. Income in a custodial account for a minor is generally taxable to the minor and may be subject to special rules. Trust accounts have their own reporting. Neither applies to this individual account.

Joint accounts. For a joint account, income is generally reported under the primary owner's taxpayer identification number; the owners allocate the income on their returns according to their interests.

Cost Basis Methods and Elections

First-in, first-out (FIFO). Under the default FIFO method, the earliest-acquired shares are treated as sold first. This often results in larger long-term gains for long-held appreciated positions.

Specific identification. You may identify specific lots to sell, allowing you to manage the gain or loss recognized, if you notify the broker before the settlement date.

Average cost. For mutual fund shares, average cost is commonly used; once elected, it applies to all shares in the account unless changed prospectively.

Changing methods. You may change your default method for future sales by notifying us in writing before settlement. Changes do not affect sales already settled.

Tax topics index

Interest income	Form 1099-INT; report on Schedule B if over $1,500

Reporting Income on Your Return — Step by Step

Step 1 — Interest. Enter taxable interest from box 1 on the interest line of Form 1040 (line 2b) and tax-exempt interest from box 8 on line 2a. Complete Schedule B if taxable interest exceeds $1,500.

Step 2 — Dividends. Enter total ordinary dividends from box 1a on line 3b and qualified dividends from box 1b on line 3a. Complete Schedule B if ordinary dividends exceed $1,500.

Step 3 — Capital gains. Transfer each 1099-B transaction to Form 8949, grouping by holding period and covered status, then carry the totals to Schedule D and to Form 1040, line 7.

Step 4 — Figure your tax. If you have qualified dividends or net capital gain, use the Qualified Dividends and Capital Gain Tax Worksheet to apply the preferential rates.

Step 5 — Additional taxes. Determine whether any additional tax on net investment income applies based on your income, and complete the related form if required.

Common Questions About This Statement

Why does my statement show more income than I received in cash? Reinvested dividends and capital gain distributions are taxable even though you did not receive cash; they were used to buy additional shares.

What if I sold shares from more than one lot? Each lot may have a different cost basis and holding period. The statement reports lot-level detail; report each on Form 8949 accordingly.

How do I know if a dividend is qualified? Box 1b shows the qualified portion. Qualified dividends must meet holding-period requirements and be paid by a qualified domestic or qualified foreign corporation.

Are there state-specific considerations? Yes. A portion of tax-exempt interest may be taxable by your state, and some states do not conform to all federal rules. Consult your state instructions.

This concludes the consolidated tax reporting statement. Retain it with your records and use the most recent version when preparing your return.

Definitions (Continued) and Statement Index

Distribution	A payment from a fund or company to its shareholders, which may be a dividend, capital gain distribution, or return of capital.
Settlement date	The date a securities transaction is completed and ownership transfers.
Substitute payment	A payment received in lieu of a dividend or interest, often when a security is loaned; reported on Form 1099-MISC.
Qualified business income dividend	A REIT dividend that may be eligible for the qualified business income deduction (box 5).
Foreign source income	Income from foreign investments, which may carry foreign tax that can be claimed as a credit or deduction.
Original issue discount	Interest that accrues over the life of certain debt instruments and is generally taxable annually.

Tax Resources and Preparing Your Return

Where to get help. Free tax preparation help is available to many taxpayers through volunteer programs. The IRS website provides forms, instructions, interactive tools, and answers to frequently asked questions. A qualified tax professional can help with complex situations.

Organizing your documents. Gather all income statements (Forms W-2 and 1099), records of deductions and credits, and last year's return. Organizing documents before you begin helps ensure you report all income and claim all benefits you are entitled to.

Filing electronically. Electronic filing is faster and more accurate than paper, with built-in checks that catch many common errors. Combined with direct deposit, it is the quickest way to receive any refund.

Estimated taxes. If your income is not subject to withholding, or withholding will not cover your liability, you may need to make quarterly estimated payments to avoid an underpayment penalty. Higher-income taxpayers must meet a larger safe-harbor amount.

Keeping copies. Keep a copy of your filed return and all supporting documents. You generally need records for at least three years, and longer for items affecting the basis of property you still own.

Final glossary of terms

Basis	Your investment in property for tax purposes, used to figure gain or loss.
Capital gain	The profit from selling a capital asset for more than its basis.
Dividend	A distribution of a corporation's earnings to its shareholders.
Interest	Compensation for the use of money, taxable unless specifically exempt.
Realized gain	Gain recognized upon the sale or exchange of property.

Tax year	The annual accounting period for which you report income and deductions; the calendar year for most individuals.
Withholding	Amounts withheld from income and remitted toward your tax liability.

Checklist before you file

- Confirm taxable interest (box 1) and tax-exempt interest (box 8) are reported on the correct lines.
- Confirm ordinary dividends (box 1a) and qualified dividends (box 1b) are entered.
- Transfer every 1099-B sale to Form 8949 and Schedule D, grouped by holding period and covered status.
- Use the cost basis shown for covered lots and supply basis from your records for noncovered lots.
- Apply the preferential rate worksheet if you have qualified dividends or net capital gain.
- Keep this statement and confirm you are using the most recent (or corrected) version before filing.

This statement is furnished to you and to the Internal Revenue Service as required by law. Meridian Brokerage Services LLC does not provide tax advice; please consult your tax advisor regarding your specific situation. Amounts are reported in U.S. dollars.
